NICK SHEPHERD is Assistant Director of Ministry and Training for the Diocese of Southwark and a former CEO of the Institute for Children, Youth and Mission.

'An important and timely contribution to the current debate around young people and the Church.'

Professor Pete Ward
St John's College, Durham

Recent statistics seem to suggest that the Church is losing young people and failing to attract a new generation.

In an increasingly secularized culture, faith formation no longer just happens. So how do we help children and young people to form faith today and help our churches to grow in the process?

In his new book Nick Shepherd argues that there is an urgent need for faith generation within our churches. Through examining youth ministry practices, he explains both the 'why' and the 'how' of faith generation today.
